Program Speakers

Shaun Haney, founder of RealAgriculture and host of RealAg Radio (SiriusXM), delivers engaging insights on agricultural policy, trade dynamics, and broader economic trends to industry audiences across North America. He expertly analyzes North American trade agreements, cross-border regulations, U.S. farm policy, and shifting geopolitical landscapes, illustrating how high-level decisions directly impact agribusinesses, grain operators, retailers, and growers. Drawing from his extensive commentary experience, including regular appearances on RFD-TV and AgriTalk, Shaun highlights both pressing industry challenges and emerging market opportunities, offering practical strategies to help agribusiness leaders navigate evolving relationships with farmers and thrive in a rapidly changing agricultural economy.

Quan Nguyen is the Senior Fertilizer Analyst for the Market Intelligence team at StoneX, where he helps farmers, retailers, and industry participants make sense of rapidly changing fertilizer markets. Quan joined StoneX in 2023 and since then, the fertilizer market has gone through multiple periods of unprecedented market volatility, as major geopolitical conflicts and disruptions have reshaped global supply chains, trade flows, and fertilizer prices. Through the volatility, Quan has gained valuable firsthand insight into how global events can quickly impact fertilizer availability, affordability, and how volatile prices affect farm-level decisions. His work focuses on analyzing key market factors—including supply and demand, production costs, trade flows, and government policies—and translating those complex dynamics into practical insights. Quan holds a Bachelor of Science in Finance from the University of Kansas, providing the analytical foundation to tie in with practical fertilizer market knowledge.

Mike Castle - With a farm background growing up in Central Missouri, Mike spent the first 5+ years of his career trading cash grain and managing elevators across the U.S., working hands on in the industry and developing sharp insights for the ag market. He transitioned to fertilizer after joining StoneX in 2021, utilizing his knowledge of grain markets to incorporate ag fundamentals into the consultancy program, and has tied these experiences together for a broader focus as Senior Commodities Economist. Mike graduated from the University of Nebraska – Lincoln summa cum laude with an M.S. in Agricultural Economics and a minor in Business Analytics, providing the analytical foundation to tie in with practical ag market knowledge.

Banquet Keynote Speaker

JOHN KRIESEL

Still Standing. Still Smiling.

John Kriesel's story is one of the most powerful examples of resilience you'll ever bring to your audience. On December 2, 2006, a 200-pound IED in Iraq killed two of his closest friends and left him with life-threatening injuries, including the loss of both legs. He died three times on the operating table before doctors revived him, and he woke up eight days later at Walter Reed Army Medical Center to begin a long, uncertain recovery.

Told he'd likely never walk again; John defied every expectation. Nine months later, he walked out of Walter Reed on prosthetic legs. His comeback-fueled by positivity, humor, and an unshakable support system-has inspired audiences across the country.

John went on to serve in the Minnesota House of Representatives, and today he is the Director of Veterans Services for a county in the Twin Cities metro, a part-time personality on KAN Radio, and co-author of the award-winning book Still Standing.
